

I completely oppose allowing the established business relationship exemption to the Do Not Call list to apply to Indiana consumers. Until the Do Not Call list went into effect, I was receiving upwards of 5 calls per evening, often during dinner. Most of those calls were from institutions with which I already did business and were trying to peddle additional products. They were a complete nuisance. Not once did any of them succeed in selling me any additional services, either. They also did not respond to requests not to disturb me with offers. The lack of interruption after the institution of the do-not-call list in Indiana has been wonderful. I wholeheartedly encourage you not to impose the established business relationship exemption on Indiana consumers.
